The Obama administration condones torture and the abrogation of the Constitution, allowing any government official or employee or paid consultant to have amnesty for any illegal act. (3/9/09)

On Friday, in San Francisco, the Obama justice department argued to defend John Yoo's torture memos from lawsuit. This is the second time the Obama administration has defended illegal acts of the Bush administration. It has hereby drawn a line in the sand dividing the elite from the citizen and has delineated the boundaries of a dramatic two-tiered society. The elected, of our supposed democratic republic, has divorced our government from the Constitution and rule of law. I would say Mr. Obama has about two weeks to grab a hold of this ship veering off the cliff to outright authoritarianism. If Reagan to Bush2 was an incremental coup d'etat, the coup is now being concluded by the man elected by the people for the exact opposite: a return to constitutional democracy. A continuation in this direction is nothing short of an in-your-face war on democracy and will be resisted and converted into a patriotic non-violent, but civil disobedient, rebellion to restore a constitutional democracy. Grab a hold of your tri-corner and start hitting the streets!
